Spring Song.

Call them strikes-0i-0i-0i-Keep a-workin'-Atta boy.

Very few are taking the Phillies seriously this spring, but still fewer took them seriously a year ago. When they won 12 of their first 14 games or something of that sort, merry laughter went up around the circuit as 220-yard the cry arose-"Watch them blow." But there was very little merry laughter the Phillies's expense around October first. Very little.

Kindly rate them according have bettered the time materially; but to their hitting power alone?

We should say Fitz was the hardest puncher of the lot—he had more leverage, and could certainly hit a harder blow from a short range. Jeffries would follow Fitz as the lustiest walloper. Neither Corbett nor Johnson was a hard puncher and there is no great snap back of Willard's blows. Moran has to get set to put through his punch, which is robust enough when carried along by a full swing.

But the ideal puncher was Fitzsimmons, who could tear away part of a rival's roof with a jab that travelled less than 15 inches.

New champions resulted in each event. Besides the dozen points contributed by Wiss and Roborts's five for the horizontal title, the odd event—the club swinging—was also won by an Orange and Black youth named Schwabacher. The horse championship went to Longstreet, of Yale.

Final Plant Baker's Speed.

Sir: In 1911 Frank Baker stole 38 bases; in 1912 he stole 40; in 1913 he stole 53; but in 1914 he stole but 19. Does'nt this show pretty well that he was bacher. The horse championship went to Larry.

500-YARD SWIM

Miss Claire Galligan, holder of the 220-yard swimming record for women, and star middle distance mermaid of the metropolitan district, added new laurels to her long list hat night by winning the national 500-yard swimming championship in the West Sixtieth Street Public Baths. In defeating Miss Lucy Freeman, her most dangerous rival, Miss Galligan set up a new record for the distance, covering the twenty-five lengths of the tank in 8:051-5. She won by almost four lengths of the tank in sinsing with a wonderful burst of speed.

Miss Galligan, who halls from New Rochelle, also went through a fast field in the 100-yard handicap and won from scratch in 1:153-5. Miss Josephine Bartlett retained her title as champion in fancy diving, competing from scratch
